CADET ENCAMPMENT ENDS, CO. RETURNS

After three days and three nights of strenuous but interesting duty in camp and on the rifle range, the Tempe normal cadet company under command of Captain F. M. Irish returned to Tempe last evening. Camp normal was established Thursday night on the bank of the old Croconal canal about a mile north of the Phoenix-Tempe highway and with between sixty and seventy men on duty the camp presented a real war like appearance. During the night guards were on duty and the several reliefs posted at regular intervals throughout the night kept fresh men always on patrol. The last night, outpost guards were also in service and kept the officers at camp regularly advised of attacking forces.

Friday and Saturday were spent on the rifle range and a majority of the men were given an opportunity to fire at the closer ranges. Some exceptional records were made and the average was good.

With the exception of an attack night before last by a half dozen horseback riders from Tempe, the boys were not molested through the night. It has been customary for one of the national guard companies to make an organized attack on the camp, but with all of the available militiamen doing duty on the line, this year's encampment passed without such feature.

Yesterday was visitor's day at Camp Normal and many of the young ladies of the school journeyed out and were entertained at dinner. Camp was struck an hour after lunch and the march home before evening.

FIREMEN BIG TIME. Not since the big tamale feed of several years ago, have the firemen of Tempe had the time of their lives as they did yesterday at the picnic held at the Granite Reef diversion gates. Early in the morning the thirty members of the two hose companies got as fleet mounts. The step is a part of the general reorganization scheme. The vessels of the division will carry at least four aeroplanes, each with catapulting devices for launching them. The aeroplanes, added by the navy, are expected to make up for the lack of fast scout cruisers in the navy.

Consistent with cleanliness and the proper protection of public health, the garbage season will make its rounds twice each week. Monday and Friday are the two days chosen and the marshal advises that it will be necessary for all to see that their garbage is kept in proper containers and that it is ready to load on the wagon when it arrives.

MODERN WOODMEN TIME. The Modern Woodmen lodge will meet in the Old Fellows hall tonight and conclusive to the initiation ceremony to be performed in ice-cream and other refreshments will be served.

TEMPEAN TONIGHT. Four reels of the popular photoplay serial "The Diamond from the Sky" will be screened at the Tempean theater tonight. The management realizing that this serial is exceptionally long has secured two chapters each week. Two other reels will be shown with this feature tonight.

IRRIGATION WATER. Marshal Browning advises that the town will get a run of irrigation water today commencing at 12:45 this afternoon.

HI PLAY ON 19TH

"A Pair of Spectacles" is the title of the play that the seniors of Tempe high school will present at the opera house on Thursday night of this week. The ticket speculators are working the town and already enough cash has been checked in to insure a big attendance.

FOR SALE. Thoroughbred driving mare, sound, fast. Also buggy. Inquire Fred C. Breelan, Tempe, Ariz.—(Adv.) 1m CONGREGATIONAL PARSONAGE. Ground was broken Friday morning for the new Congregational parsonage or the lots immediately west of the church building. The architect L. G. Knipe, has planned a most beautiful and commodious residence. The ground plan, including porches, covers a space 32x45 feet. It is to be of brick in the popular bungalow type and will doubtless prove a useful addition to the equipment of the church. An active canvass for funds with which to complete the structure is now being made and the committee is meeting with gratifying success. Col. J. E. Price, D. G. Buck, David Carus, Prof. J. L. Johnston, Dr. R. L. Alexander and Prof. J. L. Patton are the building committee and are also charged with the financial arrangements. Mr. Carus is acting as superintendent of construction.

AT SUPERIOR. Dr. and Mrs. W. G. DeVore spent Saturday and Sunday at Superior returning to their home in Tempe last evening.

KYRENE BOARD MEET. The Kyrene board of trustees met Friday night and laid plans for the addition of another room to the present building and added another teacher to the force for the new term. Miss Ruth Botkin was selected as principal and will teach the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Miss Stella Jordan is the new teacher and will have charge of the fourth and fifth grades and music and Miss Edith Warner will teach the primary grades.

AUTO OVERTURNS. Enroute to the Granite Reef dam yesterday morning with a party of the Tempe firemen, Frank Parry's Ford overturned going at a rate of nearly 30 miles an hour but fortunately all of the members of the party escaped unharmed. The accident occurred near Scottsdale and after working the balance of the day on the car, Parry was able to run it in on its own power last evening when the jury pickers returned from their outing at the reef.

GOOD ROADS COMMITTEE. The Mesa Commercial Club has appointed the following men as delegates to the Arizona good roads meeting to be held at Phoenix today and tomorrow: C. A. Faldwin, Hugh Dana, W. K. Bowen, P. E. Fuller and V. D. Johnson. Delegates were selected also for the state board of trade meeting to be held on May 17 at Phoenix. The following will go from the Mesa club: C. Fred Brackett, J. G. Spangler, J. W. Lesueur, Peter Apple and V. D. Johnson.

LATEST FASHION NOTES from the FASHION CENTRES

THE Horse Show in New York has opened its doors and is vastly entertaining as well as brilliant. The opera will come next and we are preparing therefore and there are all sorts of beautiful costumes to be seen, not alone at the show, but also on the street and displayed for the benefit of the many strangers who always are in town during the week. As is commonly the case, the fur makes really the most important feature of the costume display. From time immemorial, the horse show week has been the date set for the opening of the fur season. It seldom is really cold enough to make for real comfort, but weather conditions are far too trivial to be allowed to hamper the world of fashion, and fur coats, fur trimming and the high, enveloping collars of fur are being worn with great éclat and distinction. For evening wear, the loose, ample wrap is the accepted one and it is to be met in every available skin from ermine to squirrel. For the street coat, the redingote is a much liked model and redingotes are found in such fur as seal and also are conspicuous made of velvet combined with fur. A notable one, for example, is of black velvet, richly embroidered with gold and silver and combined with breithaupt. A very superb coat of seal shows a "Chin-Chin" collar and deep cuff of softest ermine, and there are numberless evidences of similar combinations. An exceedingly handsome redingote met early in the week was of Hudson seal in Russian style with a wide belt of the fur and a very full, flaring skirt. It was finished with exceedingly high "Chin-Chin" collar and deep cuffs of skunk. Caracul lends itself to the redingote idea and the making of plaited and draped effects with marvellous success. The shorter coats for the street take a great many different forms. A notable one is a jacket of seal with a loose, raglan back and high collar that rolls over to reveal a lining of ermine. Smaller fur pieces take the form of scarfs and of collars and the scarfs are worn most interestingly. The long straight one that we used to know as "directoire" is to be seen in a variety of skins and is worn with one and wound closely around the throat, while the other hangs loose from the left shoulder down nearly to the hem of the skirt. A very smart and beautiful model is of white ermine of the tailless sort, combined with narrow strips of seal and was carried with a round muff to match. The wide scarfs of shorter length are many of them draped over the shoulders after the manner of shawls, with the ends crossed at the front, but the younger contingent, at least, is apt to place the scarf straight across the body.

Afternoon costumes show a great many beautiful materials, but perhaps there is nothing that can be said at once to be more fashionable or more elegant than the redingote suits of heavy satin. A very beautiful one is of brown satin with a high, choker collar, deep cuffs and the band at the lower edge of the coat of natural beaver. In cut and in treatment, however, the costume is simple, for the coat is simply graceful, full one, belted while the under skirt is plain and of moderate width. A novel feature, however, is found in the belt which is slipped through two small rings of dark red at each side of the front. The entire costume gives a sense of quiet elegance that is very charming, but the lining is a flowered silk in rich and even sumptuous colors.

The evening costumes are always of interest. The latest to have appeared give evidence of the great favor for rich, metal brocades. They are of necessity somewhat simple in cut and in style, for material of the sort is so superb of itself that it will not allow of trimming to any extent and must be used on comparatively plain surfaces to give the best results. A fascinating gown that makes a good example is of white silk, richly and heavily brocaded with silver. The skirt consists of a long plain tunic slightly gathered at sides and back and finished with a band of silver lace sewed to its lower edge. Beneath the tunic is seen a narrower skirt all of silver lace bound with plain satin and on the edge of the tunic is a tiny little bit of black fur. The bodice is quite plain at the back and forms three deep points at the front, two of which extend to the shoulders where they are joined to the back by means of strips of rhinestone beads. The center point is of half length and is arranged over a band of exquisite silver lace. There are tiny little sleeves of tulle and there is just a little drapery of the tulle against the skin, above the brocade and silver lace, that has a delightfully softening effect. The waist line is finished with a narrow girdle of silver ribbon and at the left side, hang long ends of the same, finished with bands of silver lace and edged with fur.

Everything that scintillates, everything that sparkles, everything that is brilliant is worn for evening occasions.

Patterns No. 8830, 8788, 8869 are cut in sizes 24 to 34 inches waist.

Pattern No. 8804 is cut in sizes 24 to 30 inches waist.

THE Norfolk coat is always a satisfactory one and this one shows the military pockets that are new and distinctive. It is admirable for all seasons and for a variety of different materials. Here, blue gabardine is shown, but white gabardine and white serge are especially smart made in this way.

Plaid skirts are not alone fashionable, they are very generally becoming. This one is so arranged as to give the effect of a plain panel at the front and one at the back, also it is cut off at about the hip line and finished with a peplum prettily shaped yoke.

The top coat makes an important feature of mid-winter fashions. This one is eminently smart, the fulness being laid in plaits under the arms where it is held by means of a mental belt. At the same time, it is absolutely simple and easy to make. The high collar and the deep cuffs are important features and are exceedingly fashionable made of fur. The coat as illustrated is made of black velvet and the fur is natural fisher.

Here is a coat that can be made in two entirely different ways. Here, it is shown plain and loose, but if preferred, it can be laid in plaits under the arms and belt passed over these plaits to hold them in place, also there are patch pockets that can be used if liked. In the illustration, broadcloth is trimmed with rows of braid.

Every variation of the gored skirt is in vogue. This one is in four pieces, but the front and back are finished and lapped over the sides to give the effect of panels or box-plaits. The finish can be made at either the raised waist line or at the natural waist line. In the illustration, broadcloth is trimmed with braid, but the model is a good one for all seasonable materials and all seasonable trimmings.

The skirt that combines a plain body portion with plain flaring skirt is one of the smartest and best liked of the season. This one can be made with a body portion showing a straight edge as it is here or with a shaped front edge. The collar can be turned up about the throat or down over the coat. The very wide bell-shaped cuffs are exceedingly smart, but plain sleeves can be used if preferred. The peplum can be cut with a straight edge or with points at front and back or with points at sides.

This is one of the prettiest of the yoke skirts. At the front and back, there is a plain panel or box-plait and at the sides, the skirt is gathered and joined to a yoke. The panels at front and back can be extended over the yoke to the lower edge, or cut off and joined to its lower edge. For the medium size will be needed, 4 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide, 4 yards 4 1/2 the width at the lower edge is 3 1/2 yards.

Here is an exceedingly smart coat with belt and yoke that give just a little suggestion of the Norfolk idea yet which is entirely distinctive and new. The belt is cut in one with the side portions and passed over the plaits at front and at back to hold them in place.

The skirt that is finished with lapped edges at the front is a pretty and a fashionable one. This model is made in live gored, which are perfectly smooth over the hips, while they flare gracefully at the lower edge.
